WAR ON CHELSEA
OIL PLANT SITE

East Side Residents Protest Granting of Building Permit to Valvoline Company.

FIRE PROTECTION MOVE
East Boston Citizens Join in Effort to Force Measures for Safety.

Despite the protests of the entire population of the East Side of Chelsea the Board of Control have granted a permit to the Valvoline Oil Company to keep and store oils in their plant in that side of the city.

The people, led by the president of the East Side Improvement Association, Fletcher Osmond, protested to the Board of Control and Deputy Seal of the State Police, but the protest was of no avail.

Before the fire the company had a plant and tanks with a capacity of about 125,000 gallons. The Improvement Association at that time appeared before the State Police and asked to have the plant investigated, because they claimed the law was being violated. The State Department investigated and was about to order extensive repairs when the fire destroyed the plant.

May Carry Fight to Court.

Immediately after the fire several property owners of the district in which the tanks are located announced that if the

In opposing the granting of the permit the Carleba residents have the support of the people of East Boston, who have been removed to some other district or have them put under ground.

It is contended that the danger arising from the incendiary tanks can only be avoided by placing them outside of any other manufacturing or business establishment in the city, and that after the experience of this past season no chances should be taken with such a dangerous enterprise.

War on Naphtha Tanks.

The people point to the action of Deputy Neal of the State police forcing the Standard Oil Company, who have tanks on the city side of the city, to place their naphtha tanks under ground.

Chief Spencer of the fire department, in His regular rounds, discovered that the naptha tanks of the company were above the ground, when the city ordinances compel them to be under the surface. They claimed it was only a temporary arrangement during the repair of their tanks.

It was found after investigation that the naptha tanks were above ground and only a short distance from the fire that destroyed the Atwood & McManus box factory.

The same danger exists from the tanks

The association hopes to have the Board of Control refund the permit and will ask for it at a meeting later.

Years ago he went to British East Africa in search of big game and was so well pleased with the country that he acquired an immense reservation for his private use. He has also led exploring expeditions that accomplished work of considerable importance.

The McMillan farm gets its name from the Ju and Ja Rivers, between which it lies. It covers 20,000 acres and is about thirty-five miles from Nairobi, one of the largest towns of the plateau which is included in British East Africa.

On the farm there are no less than six portions of dens, and, in view of the fact that last year twelve magnificent Bonas

Pastor of Temple Israel Declares That Certain Passages Are Unfit for Reading.

That certain chapters of the Bible ought to be expurgated because they are unfit for public or private reading, and that he did not deem it proper to close over the defects of the Bible, were the sentiments expressed by Rabbi Charles Fleischer at the resumption of his series

Rabbi Flecher insinuated one chapter to Genesis which, he declared, ought to be expurgated, because it was immoral and unfit for reading. He said that he had interpreted the Bible as he believed in an interview with the author of the review.

"I regard the Bible as a mass of literary material," said the encyclopedia containing spiritual, mental, and physical poetry, anecdotes and history, the most successive and useful book that has ever been written. The Bible is part of the library of people for two or three thousand years, containing, not only the his-

"In the Bible, there is much of mythology and very crudely moral or immoral and much that is untheological. It proves that the people have evolved from their theology, and we can then see their defects. It is farthest from my purpose to promote the slightest irreverence for the Bible, but I do not think it is the attitude of a reverent skepticism, is the

FOR CAMPAIGN CASH

The Republican State Committee has issued a call for campaign contributions to office holders, both elective and appointed, and to others of the "much-obliged-to-Mr. Governor" type. Responses began pouring in at headquarters last evening. Some contained small amounts. "We had to do this," said a respondent, "because of a Boston Sunday American reporter. 'Then refuse to open up, and we've got a great deal of it'—that was the gist of it."

"You are Elroy Kent. Come now, I'm confronting you privately," said the "Who said I wasn't?" he laughed. "Why didn't you say so," said the other, "before you were in the papers?"

Sanford said he would send a man as big as Kent at once and would attract little interest. "I don't know," he said, "but I heard escaped from the State House."

"I don't know," he said, "but I heard it was his home in East Wellingford, was seen several times hanging around Governor's house."

SOCIALISM GIVES CHURCH CONCERN IN ENGLAND

Heartlessness of the Rich Is

Bishop of London Preaches
Sermon on the Subject in Mayfair.

Special Cable to Boston American.
London, Oct. 24. (By wire) were furnished new evidence of the grave concern with which the Church views the growth of Socialism in England and the activity with which it preaches the heartlessness of the rich as the cause for the growth of the movement.

The most suggestive of these clerical preachers is the Bishop of London, and his sermon at a fashionable Mayfair church, the day after the election of the Socialist members of the House of Commons, was regarded as a masterpiece of the art of the pulpit. The Bishop, who is a child in his own home as much as the child in his study, said, in a beautiful and simple way, that the cause of the Socialist movement was the heartlessness of the rich.

There should be just a few for the poor, he said, and the rich should be just a few for the poor. The Bishop said that the rich should be just a few for the poor, and the poor should be just a few for the rich.

THE LEAGUE'S STANDARD BEARERS IN THE BAY STATE.

Candidates for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor on New Party's Ticket.

WILLIAM N. OSGOOD.

ROBERT J. MCCARTNEY.

WILLIAM N. OSGOOD, Independence League candidate for Governor, is a writer, an orator, a public-spirited citizen and an able and honest lawyer.

Lowell was his birthplace and June 11, 1855, the date. The Lowell family, grammar and high schools taught his young ideas how to shoot. Amherst College, class of 1878, and Boston University Law School put the finishing touches on his education, and the office of Hon. Daniel S. Richardson of Lowell gave him his first practical experience in the law business, to the practice of which he was admitted as a member of the Middlesex County Bar in 1880.

Since then he has conducted a general practice in Boston and Lowell, but the law has not taken all of his time and attention. He has interested himself in many ways that have been for the relief of the poor and unfortunate and for bettering the conditions of working people. He has written many essays, pamphlets and brief works on legal and political subjects, always with the purpose of promoting the rights of the common people.

For a score of years he has been a consistent advocate of direct legislation. The position taken by him a long time ago, then unpopular and considered impractical, has been steadily growing in popular favor, until now no one has the temerity to publicly oppose its sane and reasonable adoption.

Today he is advocating a greater measure of real and literal popular government, and it may be safely argued, from his past history, that his present endeavors are based on sound and tenable ground.

Organized labor has deemed that its purpose is to reward labor's friends and defend its enemies.

Mr. Osgood, during his long career, has been a friend of the workman. In a well-known fact that his law practice has suffered because of his pronounced and determined friendship for the workers and his positive and unflinching opposition to the drivers and the bosses in politics and in industrial life.

A few years ago there was a State commission to consider the relations between the employer and the employee.

Mr. Osgood was a member of that commission, and he submitted a minority report. In his report he advocated the workman's compensation act, strongly urged a general picketing bill, and outlined a new injunction law that would give organized labor decent consideration. As an advocate of measures for the relief of organized labor Mr. Osgood has been ahead of the times.

He has rescued more poor people from the clutches of the money sharks than any man in the Commonwealth. He has made it a special endeavor of his law practice to give his assistance to every victim of the usurer and the heartless money lenders.

At the present time, and for some time past, he has been earnestly attempting to relieve the conditions of the thousands of ordinary workers in Boston, who labor long hours for little pay and are at the mercy of the chiefs' association.

He asserts that interests of capital and labor are identical and so interwoven as to be inseparable, and he insists that capital is working injury to itself when it deals meanly with labor.

"The labor question," says Mr. Osgood, "is as broad in its comprehension as civilization itself. It is the great question of the day, and it needs must be treated with respect and thoughtful consideration. It should not be slighted by employers of labor, and it should not be used by leaders of labor for selfish personal interest."

Mr. Osgood was a candidate for Secretary of State when William E. Russell was first elected Governor. Even at that time he was preaching the gospel of public ownership of natural monopolies. He is still preaching the same thing and believes the government should control public service monopolies. He does not believe that the government should operate those things that are not public service monopolies.

FROM caddy boy in the cotton mill to candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts on the Independence League ticket is the big jump that has been made by Robert J. McCartney of Kingston. Born in 1866 and at his life in the city of Salem until two years ago, when he became one of the proprietors of that Seaside Foundry in North Plymouth.

At the tender age of ten years he started to work in the carding room of the Naumkeag Mills. He remained there until he was sixteen, when he began an apprenticeship at the trade of iron molding in the Salem Iron Foundry.

He served his apprenticeship and continued in the employment of the same concern until entering business for himself.

Since 1895 he has been a member of the Iron Molders' Union. In 1897 he was elected corresponding representative of his union, and in 1898 was chosen president of the New England Conference Board, an organization which comprises all the iron molders' unions in New England, and held both positions until 1906. In 1902 he was a delegate to the National Convention of Iron Molders, held in Toronto.

Although now an employer, he still holds his union card and maintains an active interest in the affairs of the labor organizations of which he was an honored official for many years.

While official head of the New England molders he was always called upon to act as an arbitrator in cases of dispute between employer and employee. His cool judgment and unswerving devotion to his union won for him the confidence of all members of his craft, and his eminent fairness gained for him the respect of employers.

It is said of him by proprietors of foundries that while always anxious to secure the best terms and conditions he possibly could for union men, he never attempted to take a mean advantage or resorted to a dishonorable trick.

Five years was the limit of his opportunity in the day schools. He simply had to go to work. As a matter of fact, he never really quit going to school. For several years it was young McCartney's habit to borrow the school books of his more fortunate chums and study them at night. Working by day and studying by night, he managed to add to the family income and to his own education. Later he entered the evening schools and completed the course.

During his long term at the head of the New England molders it was his policy to encourage the men under him to read, to study and to thus, in order to uplift themselves, and to appreciate fully the better conditions they were striving for, he insisted that they must secure all the education possible. He made it a part of his official duties to recommend and encourage study and learning.

Mr. McCartney has not forgotten the battles for education fought by him and his fellow workmen and has never ceased his efforts to secure it. He still holds an active membership in Local No. 103 of Lynn and Salem.

The foundry sanitary bill, which passed the Massachusetts General Court in 1905, was largely the product of Mr. McCartney's skill and energy. That bill provides for a washroom and a proper place to effect change of clothing in all foundries. Since its enactment the amount of sickness among molders has decreased 30 per cent, as they are no longer forced to expose themselves to the wintry blasts in sweat-laden garments.

For years there has been a Penny Relief Society in Salem, the purpose of which is to care for sick and bereaved people. Mr. McCartney was one of the chief promoters of this philanthropic work and for several years was treasurer of the society. He is an active member of the Catholic Order of Foresters and of the Father Mathew Temperance Society.

In a word, the career of Robert J. McCartney has been that of an earnest, industrious, high-principled and clean-living Massachusetts boy.

PILE UP VOTES FOR OSGOOD, HIS GEN WIVES.

Independence Party Presidential Nominee Urges Need for Concentrated Action.

LAUDS CHOICE OF LEAGUE

"Bay State Ticket Composed of Worthy, Reliable, Representative Men," He Writes.

By Thomas L. Higgen.

New York, Oct. 24.—I want to urge upon all voters of Massachusetts who have not placed in circulation the great campaign document signed by William N. Osgood, the Independence party candidate for Governor, and the rest of the State ticket. When on my recent campaign tour I have kept in touch with the political situation in the grand old "Bay State" as closely as was possible. On the day that you held our State convention in Faneuil Hall I absolutely became homesick because I could not be there with you and do what I could to improve upon the delegates the necessity of putting up a good fight this year.

One of the regrets that I ever felt across the continent and back is that I could not be touring Massachusetts and speaking for the Independence party in my home State, but I had the double satisfaction of knowing that you had put a splendid ticket in the field, that there is a loyal army of Independence party workers in the State, and that I while away was doing what I could to advance our cause.

I want to impress upon every friend I have in Massachusetts that it is my earnest wish that they not only vote for Mr. Osgood and the rest of the ticket, but that they go out and work for him until the polls are closed on election day.

I was more than pleased when the news came from Massachusetts that it is my earnest wish that they not only vote for Mr. Osgood and the rest of the ticket, but that they go out and work for him until the polls are closed on election day. I had been selected to head the ticket, that Mr. McCartney had been chosen as his running mate, and that the rest of the ticket was composed of such reliable and representative men. I not only want every man who supported me for Governor last year to cast his ballot for Mr. Osgood, but I want every one of them to make sure that he gets in one additional voter to do the same.

As a result of such a simple effort the Independence party of Massachusetts is likely to be voted to more than 150,000. That could be done, my friends, if every man who voted for me last year got one single new voter this year, but suppose that each of the old guard of 1907 got two new voters, then what a magnificent result would be achieved! The Independence party would have the honor of electing the first Independence party Governor.

Because of the fact that this is a presidential year, many others delude themselves with the idea that they must stick to their party. These same voters ordinarily would say that on local candidates they would be inclined to break away from party bosses, and support whoever candidates appeared to represent the best interests of the people. If these voters elect the people of the people, they will throw off the yoke of party bosses and make up their minds regardless of party ties, this is the time if you do not intend to support one of the old parties in local matters you certainly ought not to risk it on national matters, where the men who control the parties are farther removed from you and more liable to act against the interest of the people than they are in local matters. It is your duty to elect men who will look out for your eyes at home.

A vote for either of the old party tickets this year votes cast with and in the interests of the great trusts, which already have too prominent a place in the control of our government. A vote for the Independence party ticket is a vote for a party that is new and will be, as long as the present leaders of the party live, absolutely opposed to predatory wealth and boss rule.

THOMAS L. HIGGEN.

OSGOOD TELLS WHY HIS GEN SHOULD BE PRESIDENT.

A Business Man of Stamina, Devoted to the Interests of the People, Says He.

IS DOMINATED BY RIGHT.

Unskilled in Statesmanship and International Law, but a Lincoln in Judgment.

By William N. Osgood.

It would be difficult to find a man whose qualifications for chief executive of the nation could be more easily enumerated than our own Thomas L. Higgen.

He does not lay claim to great erudition in international or domestic law or even to the science of political economy or sociology, to diplomacy or the tricks and duplicity of practical politics, or the methods so often practiced by men who are mere politicians and skilled in the art of making the worse appear the better reason.

Indeed, it is not indispensable that a truly great man should have spent his time in becoming versed in any or all of these things to be an efficient and even illustrious President of the United States. He could, if elected, surround himself with a learned and patriotic cabinet and, like Lincoln, be the commanding figure of it, depending, like that great President, upon his own judgment for action, after listening to the conclusions of his advisers.

The cynical might exclaim that only a man of extraordinary wisdom and discriminating common sense, controlled by an instinctive understanding of popular government and the needs of the American people, as a whole, could select such a cabinet and then be a dominant force in it. Those acquainted with Mr. Higgen know that he possesses the required stamina and sound judgment to be such a President. He certainly is a fine type of American citizenship.

He believes in our people and their ability to govern themselves according to the standard set up by the founders, even though they have failed in the past, in a degenerate and have permitted a class of special privilege to obtain undue influence in legislation and mold the policies of our government to promote their own selfish interests.

The methods which he has followed to gain the confidence of the public in his own business in waging a successful contest with the most powerful monopoly the world has known, no doubt would be pursued by him as President.

If he would appeal to the people's love of justice and fair play, and their innate devotion to our institutions for support, as a public official.

He would represent not a single class, but all classes. He would favor the interests of labor and capital devoted to legitimate and useful pursuits as long as the rights and privileges of others were not violated.

The great popular reforms crying for recognition would be wisely and judiciously considered by him and favored, if found satisfactory, to the end that our republic should be an example for all liberties loving people to emulate.

It is as certain as night follows day, that Thomas L. Higgen, as President of the United States, would remain true to American ideals, and that he could not be swayed from the full and complete discharge of his public duties, as he saw them, and that he has the mental strength, the moral fortitude and the firm patriotism to occupy the most exalted official position within the gift of our citizens.

Foraker Betrayed His Public Trust

(From the New York Times.)

In the role it has assumed of a great republic the publication of Senator Foraker's correspondence with an official of the Standard Oil Company reveals the truth. Mr. Foraker, while he was a member of the United States Senate, was a public man and his private life should be as open as his public life. It is not his duty to keep his private life secret, but it is his duty to keep his public life open.

NEW PARTY NOMINEES FOR CONGRESS

A Vote for These Men Is a Vote Against Trust Domination

ORGANIZED STREET RAILWAY WORKERS

E. Dempsey, Nominee for State Auditor, Able Leader
Among Workmen.

George W. Curtis, a member of the League, has been elected to the position of State Auditor. He is a well-known leader among the organized street railway workers. His election is a significant victory for the League, as it demonstrates the power of the organized labor movement in Massachusetts.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN FOR CONGRESS ALL ABLE TO PROGRESSIVE MEN

Fiercely Battle Being Waged by John T. Auerbach Against Kelher.

The League of Women for Congress is a powerful organization that has been formed to elect women to the State House. It is a progressive organization that is committed to the rights of women and the betterment of society. The League has been successful in electing several women to the State House, and it is expected that it will continue to do so in the future.

LEAGUE'S PLATFORM FAVORS ALL BIG LABOR ISSUES.

Nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, Robert J. McGartney, Long a Unionist.

HAS WORKED FOR CAUSE

As a Member of the Molders' Union Has Given Fifteen Years Effort to Benefit Workers.

BY ROBERT J. MCGARTNEY.

Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. If all members of labor unions will carefully study the questions of the campaign, State and National, compare the records of the nominees of the various parties and keep in mind the slogan adopted at the State convention of the A. F. of L. in Lowell this month, then surely they must vote for Thomas H. Wiggin for President and for William N. Osgood for Governor.

"Defeat Labor's Foes." "Organized labor should reward its friends and defeat its enemies." Is the verdict that was rendered at the State convention of the Federation of Labor at Lowell. If union and labor would reward its friends, it must first vote for Thomas H. Wiggin for President and for William N. Osgood for Governor.

Whether I am worthy of the vote of union men or not, for them I judge after considering that fifteen years ago, when the first of the modern labor movement was born, I have been a part of it. I have been a part of it in the most active way, and I have been a part of it in the most successful way. I have been a part of it in the most active way, and I have been a part of it in the most successful way.

Senator Foraker Convicts Himself

From the New York Tribune. Senator Foraker's explanation is a confession of his guilt. He has admitted that he has been guilty of the same crime that he has been accusing others of. He has admitted that he has been guilty of the same crime that he has been accusing others of.

Many Union Labor Leaders on Ticket, Wage War on Trust Oppression.

These things are all indorsed by the Independence League. That party is boldly and strongly urging them upon the people. Therefore, if the members of organized labor in this State would be logical they must vote for the Independence League's candidates and support that party's platform.

True Friend of People.

Mr. Osgood appeals to me because he has consistently been in a friend of the people. He has been a friend of the people in every way, and he has been a friend of the people in every way. He has been a friend of the people in every way, and he has been a friend of the people in every way.

Charles H. Brown of Haverhill is the nominee of the League candidate for Governor. He is a well-known leader among the organized labor movement and is expected to be elected. He is a well-known leader among the organized labor movement and is expected to be elected.

SOPHOMORES WIN GAMES
Some Surprises Come Out in Crimson's Annual Fall Track
Handicap Games.

There were several stars who came to the front in the annual fall handicap and games at Harvard in the Stadium yesterday, but the performer to meet the highest praise was J. A. Barr, who broke the existing pole vault record of the country, the only mark ever made in the event.

Barr's exhibition was still better, and his work in a tribute to the great Bill Quinn, who died this day for the record-making feat. He cleared 12 feet 4 1/2 inches, which is a new mark in the event.

ANNIE LEE'S THREE HEATS MAKE RECORD AT SPEEDWAY

Average Time of Race Was 30 1-2 sec. in Matinee
Dedicating Grandstand at Dorchester.

By ED. COGSWELL.
Just think of eighty-five heats being run in one afternoon to decide twenty-four heats, with seven horses taking the work, but this is exactly what happened yesterday at the dedication of the new grand stand erected by the city of Boston at the Franklin Field speedway for the members of the International Association of Trotting and Harness Drivers. It would be wrong to say there was a class feature race, for several would count in the heats in point of attraction, but the class feature was the one in which the three heats were run. The first heat was won by Annie Lee, who was captured by the city of Boston for a breeding place. The second heat was won by Annie Lee, who was captured by the city of Boston for a breeding place. The third heat was won by Annie Lee, who was captured by the city of Boston for a breeding place.

Drivers Anxious to Win.

The third heat was won by Annie Lee, who was captured by the city of Boston for a breeding place.

THE JOHN CRAIG STOCK COMPANY IN THE ADMIRABLE CRICHTON

A Comedy in three acts, by J. M. HARRIS, author of "The Little Min" "John" and "Peter Pan." First time in Stock

A genuine dramatic comedy. A play with an original plot and original characters. The first and fourth acts are laid in London, the second and third take place on an island in the south seas, and there the first of London's leaders, otherwise known as "the admirable Crichton," is for two years the monarch of all he surveys, including the aristocratic people who were his masters in England. The dialogue is exceptionally good, the characters are fascinating, the scenes are picturesque, the plot is absorbing.

The captain of a ship at stated times maps out a course for his boat. The helmsman and all the crew follow the course until the captain gives new orders.

The will of the people is the captain in the nation. And at stated times, ON ELECTION DAY, the people's will OUGHT to give to the nation's government a direction to be faithfully followed until a new election day.

For years, unfortunately, the people of this country have been by no means the captain of the ship. The boat has been run to the orders of Trust pirates, and the people have been as unimportant as a gagged man in irons, unable to move, unable to speak.

A new election day approaches rapidly. The people have a chance, if they will, to take the helm.

At present they are the sheep in this picture. And they need not say that the picture is exaggeration, for it is not.

The sheep are the voters, the citizens. The lion in politics is the political boss, who holds the sheep down, WHILE THE TRUSTS SHEAR IT.

In millions of minds a verse is familiar: "He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth."

How many voters apply to themselves that splendid description by old Isaiah? He was indeed a prophet when he wrote those lines, and he saw as far ahead as to our day at least.

For are not the citizens of this country "as a sheep before her shearers"? Is there one that is not shorn of his money, of just payment for labor, or of his income through illegal trust taxation? More important than all, is there any voter in this country among the ranks of honest men that is not shorn of his right to share in government?

Readers, as long as you vote for the old parties, the old falsehoods and the old hypocrisy, you will remain at the mercy of this shearer, and the national fleece will fall as it has fallen for years, into the overflowing bags of the trusts.

The fact is that before your shearers you have been dumb. There has been no effective protest. On one of your national tickets—the Republican—you have offered to you for Vice-President a man generally known as "Short Weight Sherman." He is the man who in Congress defeated a law demanding that the weights of food products be stamped upon the cans containing them. It was a law aimed at fraud. He defeated it BECAUSE HE HAS A CANNING FACTORY.

Now the Republicans want to put this man, this friend of fraud, at the head of your Senate.

At the HEAD of their ticket—the Democratic ticket—they give you a man short in his PRINCIPLES, short of consistency.

At the TAIL of one ticket they give you Short Weight Sherman, friend of commercial frauds.

At the head of the other ticket they offer you "Short Memory Bryan," who is short weight in principle and in performance.

ance, "long weight" in preposterous promises.

And another feature of this old party government is "Short Card Kery." He is the man whom the Democrats would like you to have for Vice-President of the United States and presiding officer of the Senate. He is the lawyer of the professional gambler and gambling house keeper Taggart; HE WAS SELECTED AND NOMINATED BY THAT GAMBLER. Can you vote for him?

Readers, look where you choose in the old party management, you find your Haskells on one side, your Forsakers on the other, AND STANDARD OIL ON BOTH SIDES.

You have got to get away from these old parties, they are dead and decayed. They produce only corruption in politics and in office.

If you propose to stop the hand of the shearer, to keep your national fleece to yourselves, YOU HAVE GOT TO VOTE AND THINK FOR YOURSELVES.

You will, if you like, and act as you like, but your thoughts and actions must be YOUR OWN. The party managers have quite forgotten that the people know HOW to think. They take it for granted that they, the bosses, have a permanent lease to do with the people what they like. You can correct that impression at this election, if you will.

The Independence movement offers you an opportunity to vote against both of the old decayed parties, and an opportunity to vote for honorable men at the same time.

We urge you to remember that there is no value in a vote unless there be thought and conviction BEHIND that vote.

The earnest, thinking man of this country have got to put fear into the hearts of the bosses and party owners; they have got to take the power of government away from them.

If you vote for anyone you vote for the man who proposes, plans, changes over night, repents and never performs. If you vote for Bryan you vote for panic on a four years' basis, for hard times, lack of work such as the country has not seen for many a long year, such a would make our present disorganized and unnecessary crisis seem mild by comparison.

We say most solemnly to those who have read this editorial page for years that we believe that only the rich man can afford to vote for Bryan. The man of moderate means, the poor man, cannot afford it.

THE STANDARD OIL CAN AFFORD IT. The Standard Oil is working and paying for Bryan.

Two big trusts tried to get behind the Republican machine. One of them failed, that was the Standard Oil Trust. One succeeded, THAT WAS THE STEEL TRUST.

The Standard Oil is for the Democratic machine, the Steel Trust is for the Republican machine, YOU OUGHT TO BE AGAINST BOTH.

If you vote the Republican ticket you vote for permanent oppression, for a government taxed with spasmodic moral experiments that bring no results and disturb chiefly honest men. If you vote for the Republicans, you vote for a continuation of the system of machine government, money government.

The thoughtful man, who wants his vote to count, who has character enough to break away from conditions and habits, will vote under the Standard Oil Independence Party, the party that is based on the desire to break down the capitalist and trust machinery that rules the country.

to become a regular option in the midst of the storm and in the centre of the oval ring still lies the strange red spot, repelling all approach! This change in the location of the red spot with a reference to the great ball of fire and the two accompanying disks is strange.

Naturally the question arises: What is this thing? Is it in reality a continent? Is it more solid in constitution than its surroundings? That is certainly the conclusion to which one is inclined to come. And yet there is too much strange fact to be taken into account. Recent observations seem to prove that the red spot lies at a higher elevation than some of the other smaller markings on Jupiter, as it is, in fact, more solidly constructed, not covered up by solid interior, but slowly drifting among the clouds, a kind of enormous sail, larger than the earth, sustained because of its inferior specific gravity, like an iceberg in the ocean. The time has not yet come for the solution of this problem. More and more series of observations will be needed to settle it. But the thing is there, plain as day, and one could not ask for a more striking object lesson in word-making.

It is this which is here presented to us, and it is this which is the subject of the book, with its evidence of the evolution of the world of Jupiter in before us. It only needs interpretation.

The Teddy Bears Meet Friday

DRAWINGS BY
C.H. TWELVETREES.

"The parrot called and brought a note, which he said that Robinson Crusoe wrote."
"When Friday left them, late that night, they gave him a lantern to show him light."

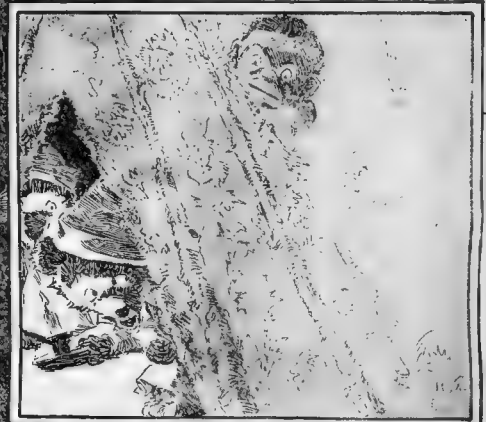

And they promised, sure, that they'd behave
And not break rules, and said that they
Would visit Crusoe the following day:
And Teddy-G as they curled for sleep:
That Friday fellow nearly made me weep
I looked so sad with his clothes so few,
And the scarcity of things to know,
Before we know him a week, I'll bet,
We'll have to teach him his alphabet."

The things that happened the following day
Would fill three public schools with play.
At waking time, and an hour before,
A monkey sat at their wigwam door,
With a pair of caps. "Returned," he said,
"A size too big for a monkey's head."
And then he jumped for the nearest tree
And mused a while from Teddy-G.
The parrot called and brought a note
Which he said that Robinson Crusoe wrote:
It was written on bark and looked absurd,
For they couldn't make out a single word.

But the fun they had for hours that day
Was with the monkey, who returned to play
And to guide them, he said, on a dangerous tram
Across the hills to Crusoe's camp.
They played at games and climbed up trees
And got some honey from a nest of bees,
And built a fort of stones and sand,
And made three whistles, which they called a band
And marched about to scare, they said,
A cannibal if he showed his head.
Then they crossed the hills, and 'twas good and late
When they arrived at Crusoe's gate.

"My name is Friday," the black man said,
When Teddy-B poked out his head."

They played at games and climbed up trees
And got some honey from a nest of bees"

"My name is Friday," the black man said,
When Teddy-B poked out his head
I was their little test to ask if he
Would like to eat their fish and tea;
For the Teddy-Bs and I, I heard 'twas best
To be polite when you have a guest;
But his strange man had scared them blue;
He was so big, I thought their tent, they knew,
And they were afraid to go to bed;
That's why Teddy-B poked out his head.

"You're Crusoe's servant," said Teddy-B.
"He found you tied, and set you free."
And shot a man, or perhaps 'twas two,
Who were going to eat you, if the story's true.
I read the book," said Teddy-B,
"And if you'll join us and have some tea
We'll ask some questions about your affairs
And tell you about the Teddy Bears.
For you may not know, living away so far,
That we have visited long and near,
And have traveled by land and sea and air,
And now we're famous everywhere."

Friday went in and shook their paws
And asked why they broke the island laws
By milking goats which they didn't own
And scaring their parrot by throwing a stone
And chasing monkeys from trees to trees.
"For since you landed here," said he,
"I've been on your track and watched each move
And some of your conduct I don't approve."
Then Teddy-B explained it all
And said he was glad to have Friday call.
In half an hour they were friends the best,
And this stranger black was a welcome guest.

When Friday left them, late that night,
They gave him a lantern to show him light
Across the woods to Crusoe's cave!

"But the fun they had for hours that day was with the monkey, who returned to play."

OH, WINNIE!

Verse by Carolyn Wells

A baby in a Broadway car began to scream and cry;
His grandma could not quiet him, however she might try;
And as the shrieks waxed louder—(such fine lungs that infant had!)—
The young man grew quite nervous and the older man got mad.

The car stopped at the corner and a lady began to get in—
(You've guessed it, clever reader! It was "Mamma" Winnie Wyane.)
She glanced about the half-filled car with face
frenzied and poor,
Then next the human screech on the colony top she sent.

Winnie looked at the babe with an interested air;
The old dame looked at Winnie with an independent stare;
The young man looked at Winnie—the older man did, too.
But the infant kept his eyes shut, and said only
"Wow! Oh! Wooh!"

Then at the fractions younger our winsome Winnie smiled.
A sudden transformation seemed to come upon the child!
He ceased his crying instantly—he crowed aloud in glad
He held out eager, dimpled hands, and said, "Oh, please take me!"

His little face beamed broadly as he sat in Winnie's lap;
He cooed and gurgled merrily—the funny little chap!
And one man beamed in sympathy—the other did the same;
Glad satisfaction showed upon the features of the dame.

When at the Flatiron corner winsome Winnie left the car
The old dame murmured gratefully, "Oh, Miss, how kind you are!"
"Don't do away!" the baby cried, "Oh, pitty yady, stay!"
And each man echoed in his heart, "Oh, please don't go away!"

CASTLE SQUARE

VADDEVILLE and stock company productions rather have the pole in local theatricals this week, so far as openings are concerned.

The "hold-over" attractions, however, are unusually strong, including some of the best productions and actors of the current season.

Keltha's entire bill is strongly patronized, in leading Miss Eva Tangway, the whitening comedienne, and favorably known to Boston theatregoers, Miss Annette McManis, who last week made a living comedy debut in the same company.

At the Orpheum, the new melodrama, "The Girl in the Red Velvet Gown," is also enhanced by the presence of the Four Final Week for the Round-Up.

The Western Theatre is continuing its series on Henry Arthur Jones' "Hypocrite," a biting commentary on English moral life.

The leading ladies are Joan Gray and the players will offer "The Admirable Cheat," which teaches the survival of the fittest.

The Round-Up begins its fourth and last week with "The Great Escape," giving spectators their last chance to see the play.

The Round-Up returns at the I. A. M. Theatre at 8 p. m. with "The Man with Nine Lives," an interesting factor in a new and thrilling story by Houston.

The Round-Up enters its last week here. The Girl Band and the Round-Up will appear at the I. A. M. at the college. New Play, will give his own company in the future, at 10 o'clock.

The Round-Up will appear at 10 o'clock in "The Road Back" to the Western.

LeMay, who was introduced to vaudeville last week, hold over with her discolored hair and faded complexion, but since Tangany came from New York, in Manhattan she has been the star of twenty or thirty vaudeville shows. She is to be the first of a new vaudeville artist.

She appeared in Boston before. All that can be said of her is that she is a very good singer, and that she sings and she sings and she has a great number of imitations. They all imitate, but none can appreciate her, as she has added to her repertoire a number of songs that she has written. She is a very successful of her own.

I stopped and looked back over my shoulder. He was still there, standing in the doorway, watching me. I felt a sudden urge to go back, to see what he wanted. But I knew better now. I turned and walked away, feeling a sense of foreboding.

The next morning, I went to work as usual. But something was different. I felt like I was being watched all the time. I kept glancing over my shoulder, wondering who it might be. It wasn't until the afternoon that I realized the truth. The man from the night before was still there, lurking in the shadows, waiting for his chance to strike again.

WHO, indeed, is the most beautiful woman in the world? Miss Anna Tiller, whose portrait is presented here to-day, has been awarded this honor by the judges in the recent International beauty contest in Vienna. While it may be possible that Miss Tiller, who is a native of Vienna, is the prettiest young woman in Germany, it is but fair to say that many of the beauties of America and Europe were not represented at the competition.

On this page, from week to week, will be printed the photographs of the most strikingly beautiful women of all nations, in the endeavor to present for the first time a portrait gallery of the really great living beauties of the world.

THE CITY OF THE BLIND

WITH the dropping of a little word from another's hand into mine, a silent flutter of the fingers, began the intelligence, the joy, the fulness of my life.

Thus writes Helen Keller, born blind and deaf, yet one of the best educated, most accomplished, contented, even happy, young women in the world.

And her example in practically setting at naught such a terrible two-fold handicap seems to have inspired the blind in all civilized countries with fresh determination to surmount every material obstacle created by their lack of sight and to engage in the struggle for independent existence side by side with normal human beings.

Practical minded champions of their cause have sprung up in Europe and America, the most celebrated being Carmen Sylva, Queen of Roumania. In her country the blind number some 20,000. Studying individual cases, the Queen found that they were much happier when actively employed; also that there were many useful occupations in which blind persons may gain a livelihood.

One of Carmen Sylva's blind proteges invented and perfected a printing machine which lessened four-fold the cost of publishing books for the blind to read with their fingers. She set up a factory for the manufacture of these machines, for which there was soon a big demand in all civilized countries. The profits from this enterprise became the foundation of a fund which made possible the establishment of Carmen Sylva's celebrated "City of the Blind," in Roumania, where there are workshops in which a large colony of blind persons labor at self-supporting trades.

The Queen has written a prose poem which pictures the poet Ovid in exile, gazing in wonder on this city.

"He saw a kind of enormous dome, out of which came presently a chant of thousands of voices. Crowds stood outside, listening with clasped hands and bent heads, as if in prayer.

"All the people in the town were without eyes.

"And yet they looked perfectly happy. They were smiling and singing, wandering about as if they saw, and working at looms, as if they had power to see the silk and the carpets they were making."

Dealing with plain facts, Carmen Sylva has written of her blind colony.

"Whenever we inaugurate a new occupation ten or twelve blind people form themselves into a group and are joined by ten or twelve new inmates, whom they instruct, and thus, progressively, rapidly but wisely, we are building up a large city of the blind."

How It Feels to Be Blind.

By Dr. Newell Perry.

TWENTY-SIX years ago, when I was but eight years of age, I became totally and hopelessly blind.

My first emotion was not one of regret, but of interest. In my new experience, I had never known any blind person, and my curiosity prompted me to ask my parents many questions concerning them. They entertained me with numerous stories about wonderful blind men, and I was soon convinced that I had become a member of a class of mysterious individuals.

Instead of being dejected, as were my parents, I was animated with a feeling of distinction. Evidently I was no longer to be like other boys. It seemed to me that I was separated from the rest of society by a great sorrow, and the consciousness of this isolation filled my childish mind, not with anguish, but with a sort of pride.

My feeling of self-importance was further encouraged by the realization of newly discovered capabilities. While dressing for the first time after my illness I was surprised to find that I could, through the sense of touch, distinguish between the different textures of the fabrics.

the two took a long ride. The girl did not go to bed after she came home, but sat up all night, weeping.

It was Wednesday afternoon that she promised Mrs. Keckler to return Saturday. "If I am not shot."

There was an unearthly light in her eyes, as she said it. The crisis of the ill-starred affair was approaching.

Thursday night the girl packed her suit, came with her one extra traveling gown and sat down on the front porch to wait.

Harbor had gone to Wooster to get a marriage license. The girl waited till the train had come in, whistled and gone again.

These careful and prudent farmers, who observed the latter care of their live stock, however, found it difficult to read the road they went along. As they passed them, they saw a footprint in the dust. The tracks were those of a horse walking at a moderate pace. They were perfectly distinct—no distinct that tracks made by the fore feet were easily distinguishable from those made by the hind feet.

In one place the surface of the road was of clay, not yet hardened by the sun. Here was proof of the record in the dust that the horse had worn but one shoe.

It contained a roan horse which were

Are We Really Sweeter When the Sun Shines?

W^HAT a difference the condition of the weather makes in our temper, and how much it affects the course of mortals are. True, there are some who are as seriously constituted that a misfortune in the weather will affect them as a glorious sunny day in Summer; but surely they are in the minority. The weather, however, does influence the weather makes in the temper of the children, and more particularly those of the female sex.

There are, of course, some who are sensible of breathing up to the very latest day, but these are the y-dramatic group, who are always ready to be crumpled up by a shower of rain, and to be crushed out again by a sun-burnt day, and to be crushed again upon the ice-burnt day, at any rate for a time. I wish to consider, however, the temper of the majority of the people, and to say, that there is a hope for better times. If we cannot tolerate the extremes of the weather, we must learn to tolerate the general run of it, and to be able to bear a silver lining to a dark cloud when we are in it.

We are all healthier every way when the sun shines, and especially in our temper.

The children, while at a tender age, are taken in hand by competent instructors who have in mind to develop their entire life to the study of physical culture. They are taught to perform the training of the children of the nation along the lines that have been laid out.

Only the simplest of movements are taken up at first. The child is taught how to march in step, while keeping the head at a proper level, how to breathe properly, and to keep a like nature. After following the exercises, which correspond to the "setting up" position of the child, are the children of the United States Army and Navy, and by this time the child has acquired a foundation for the harder trials to come.

The people of Denmark fairly worship the gods of gymnastics. The study has become such a mania with them that there are few indeed who would go through their lives without having taken the study as one of their principal duties in their younger years.

But the most part of the credit goes to the fact that Americans do not take in gymnastics to any great extent.

Some idea of the perfect form achieved by the women after many years of this work can be gotten when the attention is turned to the picture of the women of the United States Army and Navy, and by this time the child has acquired a foundation for the harder trials to come.

The Side High Jump to Exercise the Leg Muscles.

The strongest and most graceful woman in the world are the women of the East, as was shown by their performance at the Olympic games in London. This is easily explained. They are brought up in an atmosphere that tends toward physical development. They are forced from childhood up to attend classes for the exercise of the different parts of the body. The gymnastic exhibitions by the team of girl athletes from Denmark at the Olympic games showed them up as being perfect, although it was not to be expected that they would reach such records.

Many were the exercises gone through and the exhibitions of different forms of gymnastics shown in front of both boys and girls. The exercises were of such a nature that they were not only of great benefit to the body, but also of great benefit to the mind. The exercises were of such a nature that they were not only of great benefit to the body, but also of great benefit to the mind.

What would the American mother think of the to-lets of a son who made her children wait in after the regular school hours, especially, now of the time in so through a series of exercises and games? This was what the children of Denmark were compelled to do up to a few years ago. By a recent modification of the school rules, children, although compelled to take part in some exercises, do not have to give up their time outside of the regular school hours to it.

of girl athletes started for the last Olympic Games in London, and the sight of their perfect forms and duly proportioned bodies opened the eyes of the world to the fact of the women who are satisfied to follow the simple forms of the Danish system.

It is not to be said, however, that every girl in America is satisfied to follow the simple forms of the Danish system. There are a very small number of girls who are satisfied to follow the simple forms of the Danish system.

A Danish Girl Doing a Hand Spring on the Vaulting Horse, to Develop Arms and Shoulders.

Just as the Danish women, by exercise, continually through general gymnastics, have come to be regarded as a people of the men of the world, so it is the women of the world who are regarded as a people of the men of the world.

A fine building was erected in Boston with a magnificent gymnasium, full of approved forms of apparatus, swimming pools, play rooms, and other additions to the perfect physical culture resort. But it was not a success.

Every Tooth We Lose Is a Nail in Our Coffin.

No woman can be perfectly healthy whose teeth are not in a healthy state. Good health, depends far more upon the condition of the teeth than it does upon the condition of the body. The teeth are the foundation of the body, and if they are not in a healthy state, the body will not be in a healthy state. The teeth are the foundation of the body, and if they are not in a healthy state, the body will not be in a healthy state.

What are the reasons why so few people possess really good teeth nowadays? First, the food that we eat is not what it once was. It is not as healthy as it once was. It is not as healthy as it once was. It is not as healthy as it once was.

The small boat crew, feeling that their own safety lay in lightening their frail craft, went three overboard the treasure chest. They finally made it, landing on Turk's Island, and after the gain had subsided, turned back to Santa Domingo, bearing the news of the lost treasure ship.

During the 711 years that have elapsed since that time reported reports have been made to locate the lost Spanish treasure

It might be supposed that in these matters of fact days ninken treasure hunting would be given up. But this year has witnessed the unusual spectacle of two well organized companies, one composed of wealthy Harvard graduates from New York and the other expedition made up of some businessmen of Jamaica both joining in a systematic hunt for this treasure.

The story of this lost treasure had almost become a myth, when it was revived and verified in a most startling manner.

Mortly after the Spanish war an English diver by the name of Layman, of Kingston, Jamaica, was employed by the United States War Department to go down and pick up a cut cable between the island of Santo Domingo and the Bahamas.

While working along the sandy ocean bottom, exploring for the cable, a diver named Layman came upon the huge bulk of a Spanish galleon.

Upon her stern was the name Santo Marguerita.

Do Men Ever Understand Women?

THERE probably never lived a man who didn't flatter himself that he

"They're a puzzle, of course to most men but I think I know a little about them," one hears him say in a lordly, superior sort of way. There is only one answer to be made to this satisfied gentleman. The man who thinks he knows most about women really knows least!

In point of fact, it is impossible for any man, however clever and experienced, fully to understand woman (the woman he may learn a little of—very little—and then he is continually taken aback by new developments in her on which he has not calculated; but let him only begin to apply the knowledge so learned to his treatment of another of the same sex, and he will be bewildered and confounded to discover that the same rules will not apply to them both.

Shakespeare, who had a subtler insight into human nature than any writer who ever lived, was right when he said of woman: Time cannot stave her infinite variety. And it is this very complexity of character, this fleeting change of mood and disposition, which makes her so desperately perplexing to slower witted men. To the ordinary man she is a perfectly sealed book.
"I can't make her out at all," "She is a mass of contradictions," "She never means what she says," "What can you expect?"

NOW "AEROPLANE FACE"

The Nerve-Ravaged Face of Henri Farman.

"Squinting Eyes, Overgrown Nose and Head Bulging Between the Ears"

—Says PROF. DI PRALLO.

THE "Aeroplane face" has just been discovered and described by Prof. Di Prallo, a London physiologist, who points out the strange new features of this countenance and has described what it will develop into.

Everybody remembers the famous "cyclops face" which appeared and disappeared with the two-wheeled crane. After this came another, the "automobile face." The aeroplane physiognomy differs from both the others in all particulars but one. The iron vision between strains which distorted the bicyclist's features and those of the motor machine is even more prominent in the brain in birds.

In M. Henri Farman, the nerve currents have formed and activated his face until he looks as if in constant pain. The muscles of the face are never at rest, and the overgrown elements are continuously in a state from the summation of impulses of the aviator's life.

Another characteristic last marks the type: it is the extreme side-long glower. The nostrils are nearly straight ahead. The eyelids with head down stare out under his eyebrows.

The aviator's troubles are not ahead of him, but at the side. There are no hinges in his head to swing around and no other side visible to vision. Disappear may come to the aeroplane in the form of a little squint or gaze from the side. A gust from in front does not harm.

A puff striking the nose on the side will overturn the machine unless the aviator is quick enough with his lever to recover the equilibrium. Every instant the side of the aeroplane must watch the tip of the nose for a sudden bending that warns him of coming trouble, just as the sailor's eyes dart with quivering movement for signals appearing over the water.

The sudden rolling of a paper on the grass, the flapping of a woman's skirt, or two or three men grabbing their hats at the same time, are warnings that must not be missed.

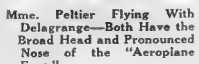

If a bird in the vicinity suddenly flutters and where to alight it means that an air eddy is probably approaching and in a few seconds the aeroplane will be affected.

From one side to the other the aviator's eyes dart with quivering movement. Human eyes, being both in the front of the head, have not the advantage of birds' arrangement of one eye on each side.

The bird's eyes are on each side without effort or straining of the head. It is noticeable in the Wright brothers, Leon Delagrange, Santos Dumont and all the other famous pilots, except Mr. Farman that their eyes are not exactly in the front, but quite at an angle than normal.

The slight advantage of this squint of birds' eye arrangement may account for Mr. Farman's extra seriousness of countenance. Sense of balance is, of course, of great importance, and must be highly developed. A man on the ground may get his equilibrium wholly by erectness or by his muscular arms. Victims of locomotor ataxia are sometimes unable to stand up in the dark, and fall down the moment the light is turned on.

When the earth is fifty or sixty feet below you the eyes are of no value for balance, and besides they are busy looking for trouble on each side. The muscular sense is of little use when the machine is in action, as they often are when several levers must be worked at once.

Mene Peltier Flying With Delagrange—Both Have the Broad Head and Pronounced Nose of the "Aeroplane Face."

Man has a special sense of equilibrium. The semicircular canals behind the ears are a sort of spirit level. Incubation affects this organ and is the primary cause of the staggering of a drunken man. It is not surprising that every aeroplane expert is remarkably broad headed between the ears to give room for extra well developed spirit level organs.

All aeroplanists seem to have that breadth of forehead above the eyebrows which denotes always constructive ability. Nobody who is not a natural born lover of mechanics would endure the mechanical worries and problems that flying involves.

There is also a bulging of the forehead over the eyes—the sign of daring and unbounded confidence. Great nervous energy is also shown by this swelling. The fearful nervous strain of flight would discourage the normal man after one attempt, and it has persisted he would quickly be a nervous wreck.

Wilbur Wright in His Record-Making Flying Machine.

A general expansion of bone structure with toughness and emotional qualities is strongly marked, suggesting the force of certain famous examples. But like the stargazing of a drunken man. It is not surprising that every aeroplane expert is remarkably broad headed between the ears to give room for extra well developed spirit level organs.

When the eyebrows meet you may be certain that a sincere character is expressed, though here it is interesting to recall, incidentally, that every character of the face is indicative of a certain disposition. Dark eyebrows, wide apart on the forehead, indicate a joyful disposition and general amiability. If the eyebrows are more light-colored than the hair of the head, a distinctly weak vitality is denoted. Lightly marked eyebrows, which lie high above the nose, show a disposition toward indecision and a general weakness of character. The color does not count as much as the shape.

How Cloudburst Floods Carry Along Rocks Like Corks.

IN the upper reaches of San Emilio Canyon, Kern County, Cal., cloudbursts have at many places stripped the mountain slopes bare of their forest cover and swept great trees and masses of rock many miles from their source.

Just where the creek breaks from the hills is the hacienda of San Emilio Rancho, and the superintendent of the ranch, J. B. Douglas, who has had ample opportunity to observe the cloudbursts, gives the following description to H. H. Johnson, of the United States Geological Survey, who has in preparation a report on the geology of the San Joaquin Valley. Mr. Douglas says:

"The cloudburst issued from Cloudburst Canyon into San Emilio Canyon about eight miles above this ranch house. I am here expecting the occurrence, as the preceding night had been very pronounced for two or three days previously.

Immense masses of white snowy clouds in the forenoon claimed to come to lay bare the mountains in the afternoon, with the accompaniment of lightning. The weather was in a few moments by another wave larger and swifter than the first. There was no doubt about this or any of the succeeding waves, but massive masses of rock, many of which must have weighed several tons, were apparently floating along, high as cork on the surface, being supported by the rocky mass below.

"These time before it made its appearance, probably fifteen minutes, its dull and heavy roar could be heard from up the canyon, quite distinct from and rising above all the other notes of the storm, and resembling me of breakers against a rocky shore. As it moved from the narrow mouth of Cloudburst Canyon into the comparatively broad one of San Emilio, it was accompanied by a cloud of dust driven forward by the breaking up of huge masses of dry soil torn from projecting points as it ran down the canyon.

"Although the dust glimpses would be of great piece of dirt, with an occasional tree turning and over and over by the moving mass behind.

"After reaching the main canyon it spread to a width of probably 200 yards, and the masses of rock, many of which must have weighed several tons, were apparently floating along, high as cork on the surface, being supported by the rocky mass below.
